During preening, territorial males of North- ern Wisconsin, especially during the nesting season, puff out his feathers and fan them. This behavior is known as the "air-drying" process. The males also fan their feathers to attract females. During this time, the males are most vulnerable to predators. Therefore, the following guidelines are provided to prevent predation.

1. Keep your dog on a leash at all times.
2. Always carry clean-up bags.
3. Clean up your pet's waste after it uses the restroom.
4. Never leave food or water out in the open.
5. Keep your dog at a safe distance from other animals.
6. If you encounter a wildlife emergency, contact the appropriate authorities.

Remember, the wildlife area is your home, and we want to ensure that all visitors can enjoy the property safely.

Field Dog Trials

Field dog trials are held throughout the year, and they provide an opportunity for dog owners and trainers to showcase their dogs' abilities in various environments. These trials are open to all breeds of dogs and can range from basic obedience exercises to more advanced drills, such as searching for scents or retrieving objects. Field dog trials are a great way to challenge and strengthen the bond between you and your dog while promoting healthy and active lifestyles.
